

Hurricane Sandy

In 2012 I joined the Hoboken chapter of an organization called CERT (Community Emergency Response Team). The first few classes were in the upstairs room of the Hoboken Ambulance Corps.

During Halloween week 2012, Hurricane Sandy made landfall in New Jersey and Hoboken being largely below sea level flooded and was generally out of commission for about 2 weeks.

The CERT management hastily assembled us into a group to help with the storm response. I was part of efforts to set up emergency communications, shelter and in some cases food and water for affected residents.

Early in 2013, the CERT class would continue at the ELKs club and we would get our official certs:

We got a nice award from the city of Hoboken (which I have misplaced). Later that year FEMA acknowledged the Hoboken CERT efforts as "Community Preparedness Heros":

FEMA Honors Achievements In Community Preparedness

2013 Individual and Community Preparedness Awards Winners Announced

WASHINGTON – The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) today announced the winners of the 2013 FEMA Individual and Community Preparedness Awards. The Awards recognize individuals who have taken action to prepare their communities. This year, highlighted accomplishments were achieved between January 1, 2012 and June 5, 2013.

"We can only be prepared for disasters if we have strong leadership in our communities," said FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate. "Today's winners represent a cross-section of our community and demonstrate how emergency management is a shared responsibility."

FEMA received nearly 200 applications from faith-based, non-profit, private sector, and community-based organizations, as well as individuals. Leadership from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and FEMA, with input from representatives of the whole community, selected this year's winners from among applicants from 39 States and the District of Columbia.

The finalists each demonstrated remarkable innovation and creativity in preparing and supporting their communities. For example, the Texas School Safety Center developed a statewide approach to emphasize youth preparedness by establishing a youth preparedness summer camp that included emergency and community specific action planning in addition to leadership development. The volunteers of the Hoboken Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) in New Jersey were essential in assisting the Hoboken Office of Emergency Management following Hurricane Sandy. The Illinois Citizen Corps Council leveraged local partners in their communities to help support their emergency preparedness programs.

This year, the third annual John D. Solomon Whole Community Preparedness Award is presented to the Los Angeles Fire Department South Los Angeles Teen CERT Collaborative. Solomon, founder of the blog In Case of Emergency, Read Blog, was an advocate of whole community engagement and collaboration, and noted that youth are the segment of any community most likely to bring about change in attitudes and behaviors toward emergency preparedness and resiliency. The LAFD South Los Angeles Teen CERT Collaborative, which partners with a wide variety of community organizations and empowers local youth, exemplifies many of the core themes of Solomon's work.

Recipients of FEMA's Individual and Community Preparedness Awards will be invited to a recognition ceremony in Washington, D.C. during National Preparedness Month. During the ceremony, recipients will share their community preparedness successes and lessons learned with emergency management leadership.

A complete list of this year's recipients and the honorable mentions for each category is available at www.ready.gov/citizen-corps-awards. Award recipients by category are as follows:

- Outstanding Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) Initiative: City of Austin CERT

I continued with CERT for a few more years. We mostly did things like provide crowd assistance in big events. Occasionally we would get spun up for storm responses but nothing like the original experience.

I got my medical first responder cert (EMR) in 2016 and began to volunteer at Hoboken Ambulance Corps. I became an EMT in 2018 and this would change my focus and pull me deeper and deeper into EMS.
